

ROOSEVELT TROUBLE COLLEGE WORLD MARKETS IN EXTENSIVE OF PRICE-LIFTING CAMPAIGN

ROOSEVELT SEEKS STEEL 'SHOWDOWN' IN MEETING TODAY

President and Aids Have Plan Framed To Deal Firmly With Mine Problem If No Accord Is Reached at Conference.

JOHNSON MAY MAKE SWING OVER WEST

NRA Chief Will Make Tour If Mine Issue Is Settled; Ford Case Hangs Fire.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(AP)—A hazard to NRA perhaps even greater than the problem of Henry Ford will engage President Roosevelt tomorrow in conference with head men of the steel world, summoned to account for a three-week failure to work out a labor agreement for their coal mines. The chief executive with Hugh S. Johnson and legal advisors has worked out definitely the course to be taken if the parley shows no results are to be had without government action, but they know that any use of force may precipitate a contest on whether the extreme resorts to compulsion authorized by the industrial law are permitted by the constitution. Mr. Roosevelt therefore intends to allow the widest opportunity for voluntary action.

If the situation works out readily, Johnson intends to start within the week on a swing out to the west coast to make a series of speeches, aimed at straightening out disputed points of the NRA program, and to get a first-hand analysis of the country's sentiment. The plan, long meditated, has not been announced because of uncertainty over the "captive mine" situation.

Press Issue.

One of Johnson's biggest concerns today is over increasing clamor that NRA's industrial control methods will, if they go the whole way, step across the constitutional guard rails of freedom of the press. He maintains this is not true and has been preparing for some time to expound his position at the first available opportunity. He wants to go further also in convincing the farm belt that industrial recovery is not the enemy of the farmer.

A tentative itinerary has been worked out, with the first stop at Chicago, but it will not be settled unless tomorrow's White House meeting winds up the captive mine trouble.

Johnson for the present is doing nothing about the Ford issue. By Tuesday or Wednesday he expects to know whether Ford actually intends to submit the required wage and hour figures to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. That may prove a turning point in the entire controversy.

200,000 Back to Jobs.

Under these master problems, NRA's labor board today claimed credit for returning to work more than 200,000 men and women either on strike, threatening strike, or locked out by employers. Senator Wagner announced his board had taken jurisdiction over 110 cases, 75 of them strikes and three lockouts.

More than two-thirds were caused by dispute over recognition of employees' representatives as collective bargaining—the union issue. Sixty-six of the first hundred cases, said Wagner, have been settled successfully, 46 by mediation on the spot, 12 through agreements reached at hearings in Washington, eight through decisions handed down by the board.

Stage Star Dies

EDWARD H. SOTHERN.

PNEUMONIA KILLS
EDWARD SOTHERN

Famous Shakespearean Actor Taken by Death in New York in 77th Year.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Edward H. Sothern, who made roles of the famous Shakespearean figures live on the stages of two continents, died last night in his hotel suite.

He was 73 years old and succumbed to lobar pneumonia.

His wife, Julia Marlowe—the Juliet of his greatest stage triumph—was at his bedside. His death was announced today. Only a few close friends and his family knew that the great actor died at 6:15 p. m. yesterday.

He had asked that his body be cremated. The funeral service will be private. The ashes will be left with Mrs. Sothern, who has not announced where they will rest.

Sothern was taken ill October 14 with a cold which developed into pneumonia. He and Mrs. Sothern had returned to the United States on October 6 and for a short visit to Broadway before going to their winter home in Luxor, Egypt.

The two who helped make the street what it is had planned to go to the shows from "the other side of the footlights."

Farm Strike Wins Little Success During First Week

Movement Enters Second Phase With Market Showing Almost No Decrease in Receipts.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 29.—(AP)—Far short of its goal, the strike of the national farmers holiday association entered today upon its second week.

Grains, milk produce and live stock were moving to markets throughout the country in little stunted volume despite the association's appeal to farmers that they withhold their products until they bring prices equal to cost of production.

Not only were prices apparently no higher as a result of the strike activities in six states, but the holiday association encountered opposition among farmers in its Iowa and Wisconsin strongholds.

One farmer was killed on a Wisconsin picket line seeking to dissuade truckers from entering Madison. A market was critically beaten.

Iowa national guards and militant farmers willing to sell at current prices kept highways open near Omaha.

Pickets have been called off by holiday association officials pending a conference of governors and their representatives from the midwest states invited to meet here tomorrow.

President Milo Reno of the holiday association and his executive board will present a set of demands to the conference.

Live stock receipts official reports showed, were higher last week than during the preceding one. Egg prices were higher, but the trend was seasonal. But prices were no higher despite the start of a milk strike in the Wisconsin milk shed.

Governor William Langer's embargo kept virtually all wheat from being shipped out of North Dakota but grain prices averaged lower.

The Wisconsin cooperative milk pool, claiming 16,000 members, has announced it will join the strike Tuesday.

The Milwaukee association of producers is opposing it.

Holiday association leaders in New Mexico, Nebraska, South Dakota and Minnesota also have ordered their followers to join Reno's strike.

Seven Hurlled to Death In Three Plane Crashes

Mid-Air Collision Brings Tragedy at Amarillo, Texas, Where Two 'Circus' Ships Crash While Diving.

By the Associated Press.

Six men and a woman were killed and one man was critically injured yesterday in airplane crashes at Amarillo, Texas, and Westboro, Mass. The Amarillo crashes occurred after a spectacular collision between two planes which were diving at paper streamers dropped by a third ship to advertise an air circus. One of the planes plunged into a street, killing the pilot and two members of the aerial troupe, and the other fell through the roof of a laundry. The pilot of the second ship was seriously hurt.

In the other accident, a cabin plane carrying three men and a woman on a flight to Worcester, Mass., fell from a farm near the Westboro airport. The four bodies were found in the wreckage.

CIRCUS TROUPE FLIERS DIE
AFTER COLLISION IN AIR

AMARILLO, Texas, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Three air circus troupe fliers were killed and a fourth was injured in the crash of two planes after a spectacular collision in diving at paper streamers dropped by another ship above the city today.

The planes fell in the view of thousands, one dropping through the roof of a laundry; the other plunging into a nearby street.

The dead were Pilot Ezra Wiggins, of Hooker, Okla.; Bill Tullis, of Liberal, Kan., and Frank Clay, of Morrill, Neb. All were in the silver-colored three-plane ship which crashed in the street.

Art Stude, of Woodward, suffered the fracture of one leg and an arm in his fall through the laundry roof. On week days a dozen or more workers would have been in the plane's path. W. R. Rutherford, who watched the ships from a distance of three blocks, said the mid-air collision was "so beautiful it seemed unreal."

I saw the silver-colored ship cut the streamers and pass on out of view," Rutherford said. "The brown plane (Stude's) headed for the streamers, when it was only a short distance away the silver plane, cutting a small arc, appeared again, headed for the tape at the same altitude. They banked in opposite directions and the silver ship seemed to side-swipe the other just back of the right wing."

Other planes in the air at the time were piloted by Bobby Gunn and Dills McHugh, both of Liberal, Kan. They announced plans for continuing the show despite the crash.

Wiggins' plane dropped in front of the Salvation Army headquarters, three blocks from the city's main thoroughfare.

The laundry into which Stude's ship fell is just two blocks from a 12-story hotel, the Amarillo.

Mrs. Stude was en route here from Woodward to be with her husband, whose condition was described by physicians as critical.

J. N. Vernon, owner, and Russell Fowler, manager of the laundry, were in the business office when the plane crashed through the roof.

The ship was smashed into hundreds of pieces. Stude was thrown clear of the wreckage and was sitting erect against a wall of the building when Vernon and Fowler reached him.

Physicians said he would recover.

"I didn't see the other plane," he said. "I was hit from the right side, and I tried to turn the ship. I don't remember anything else until I was being picked up inside the laundry."

Wiggins and Stude each held a pilot license, their associates said.

Beloved French Statesman Stricken Suddenly at Paris Home.

Paul Painleve, 77, died of a heart attack.

PARIS, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Paul Painleve, beloved French statesman, died at 5:20 a. m. today in his seventieth year.

He will be given a national funeral November 4 and probably will be buried in the Pantheon among France's illustrious dead.

A sudden heart attack, a recurrence of the illness which had troubled him several years and which caused him to abandon political life, caused his death. At his side when he died were Senator Lemoigne, Deputy Paul Appell and Dr. Laubry.

His body will lie in state in the new "Painleve" amphitheater, the conservatory of arts and letters which President Lebrun dedicated only yesterday. From there it will be transported to the Pantheon for the funeral services.

The genial, absent-minded baker's son, one of the world's most distinguished scientists, was also one of the most enthusiastic promoters of aviation.

Wright Passenger.

He was Wilbur Wright's passenger in France in 1908. He learned much from the American inventor and, as an early enthusiast, obtained the parliamentary credits for building up the French air force. He was minister of air in the last Herriot cabinet when his last illness began.

A doctor of mathematics and winner of institute prizes for works on scientific subjects, Painleve was the first French interpreter for Albert Einstein.

Throughout his life, Painleve was engaged in public affairs. He was premier of France in 1917 and in 1924, minister of the interior in the election to the presidency of France. In 1925 he again was made premier. He was an advocate of payment of the war debts to the United States.

The aged former premier, writing in the Petit Parisien last March, urged the payment of the debt interest as a condition for the resumption of the French attack. Within a few weeks the Ribot cabinet had fallen, he himself had been made premier, and he is in turn.

In 1924, however, he returned to power as the parent of a coalition government which made him president of the chamber of deputies. The following year he was made premier again.

A notable eccentricity of Painleve, he was a member of the French Academy.

ATLANTA CALLED PATRONAGE POLICY BY INDIANA TRAIN HOLDS UNCHANGED

Frank C. Simmons' Body Found Near Track; Was World War Veteran.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(AP)—In spite of patronage storms that threaten administration officials, the policy of giving out jobs slowly and by patronage was unchanged today. The organization that elected Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency.

They are prepared to meet, if necessary, the rumblings of criticism which have come in from the provinces that "patronage" is a relic of the past.

Identification was established by army discharge papers in Simmons' clothes and relatives here were notified by telegram.

Jack Manning, a city fireman who is a brother-in-law of the dead man, said Simmons had been out of work for some time. He identified Simmons' body by a description of tattoo marks on his arms and shoulder.

Simmons was a member of the 14th cavalry and was stationed at Fort Sam Houston. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. C. O. Simmons; his grandmother, Mrs. Angelyn Stovall; a brother, George Simmons; and a sister, Mrs. Angelyn Manning, of Atlanta.

The body will be brought to Atlanta for funeral services and interment at the city cemetery.

Litvinoff Movements Effectively Concealed

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The secrecy with which Maxim Litvinoff, soviet commissar for foreign affairs, has cloaked his movements on his trip from Moscow to Washington, remains unchanged today. He is expected to leave for the United States tomorrow.

Local newspapers said that he left for Paris yesterday but according to telephone messages from Paris tonight he did not arrive there on the regular express.

According to one report, he went by automobile to Frankfurt-on-Main. This report strengthens the possibility that he is taking a train there for Genoa to embark on an Italian liner.

New Labor Board Organizes Today; Will Not Consider Augusta Strike

On the eve of the organization of the regional labor board for Georgia, which Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, chairman of the NRA national labor board, recently appointed, it was emphasized here Sunday that the Augusta mill strike situation is not within the jurisdiction of the board and will not be considered.

Marion Smith, prominent Atlanta attorney, who is an "impartial observer" will preside over five representatives of labor and five representatives of labor employers, pointed out that the board will seek to compose differences arising between employers and labor in the state only in cases whose settlement is not provided for in the various codes to which industry has subscribed.

The textile industry, Mr. Smith explained, has an industrial relations board which was set up under the

Hearing on Surchage Will Open Here Today

Georgia railroads will today face the beginning of an investigation by the public service commission which is designed to eliminate pullman surcharges on all railroads operating in the state.

A rule nisi recently issued ordered all Georgia roads to appear before the commission to show cause why the surcharge should not be dropped. Numerous railroads in the United States and several in Georgia have already stopped the pullman surcharge voluntarily in an effort to stimulate business.

Fletcher Assails Bank 'Gambling,' Urges Rigid Laws

Revelation of Chase Investigation Prompts Demand for More Stringent Legislation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Even stricter legislation than is contained in the new bank law to divorce banks and investment affiliates was demanded today by Chairman Fletcher, of the senate banking committee, as a result of disclosures in the Chase National bank investigation.

Expressing amazement at the magnitude of the pool operations in Chase National bank stock by its security affiliate, the Chase Securities Corporation, Fletcher, in an interview, said the new Glass law should be strengthened in this regard.

The banking committee chairman expressed fear the bankers could find ways to circumvent the present law which requires separation of the affiliates within a year from its enactment date of last June.

He advocated bulwarking the law with stringent provisions to prevent officers of banks from being connected in any way with companies doing an investment banking business.

Fletcher called attention to testimony before his committee that the Chase securities company participated through a subsidiary in pool operations in Chase stock involving $800,000,000 over a five-year period ending in 1932.

At the same time, he pointed out, the testimony showed Albert H. Wiggin, chairman of the bank, made profits from the bank stock through personal corporations.

Wiggin will be called by the committee when it resumes the investigation Tuesday to explain further how his personal companies made such a profit when the bank's affiliate, which he headed, made only $150,000 on its share operations in the stock.

His explanation last week was that they operated differently, the affiliate going in and out of the market from day to day, while his personal operations were long-time investments.

Other Laws.

Fletcher and members of the committee are preparing other legislation to curb repetition of practices disclosed.

U. S. WORLD GOLD CONTROL IS SEEN

Observers Point Out America Now Has $4,323,000,000 of Estimated Supply of $11,600,000,000

By FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(AP)—President Roosevelt decided tonight to extend his price-lifting gold control campaign to a world basis through early purchases of the precious metal in the foreign markets.

In going into the international gold market it apparently is the president's intention to assure greater control over the monetary situation to stimulate commodity prices; and to bring nearer his goal of a managed currency.

At an all-afternoon White House conference, the president arranged for the immediate establishment of machinery for the government purchases abroad through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Government financial leaders, leaving the White House after dusk, were under strict injunction not to talk and Mr. Roosevelt revealed only that the next move would be foreign purchases.

The setting up of the machinery, the first purchase probably will not be made for a day or so.

Officers of the New York Federal Reserve bank joined in today's conference and it is expected that this institution will play a part in the new venture.

In a statement made through Stephen Early, a secretary, the president disclosed:

"The subject under discussion was the immediate setting up of machinery under which the government, through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, will be enabled to buy gold in the foreign markets."

The conference included Dean Acheson, undersecretary of the treasury; Eugene Black, governor of the federal reserve board; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Henry Morgenthau Jr., governor of the farm credit administration; George Harrison, governor of the federal reserve; Crane and Fred Kent, officers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; and Professor James H. Rogers, of Yale, and Professor George Warren, of Cornell, financial advisers.

The president in announcing his new monetary program a week ago said:

"Whenever necessary to the end in view, we shall also buy or sell gold in the world market." The end in view was described as a "control of the gold value of our own dollar at gold prices at London Saturday stood $125 below the American government quotations for newly mined gold in this country."

The price of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation purchases was $31.52.

The margin between the Washington and London rates has grown steadily since the government began its purchases at home last week. Now it is expected that the world level will rise.

Some observers here believe the Plan To Avert Health Emergency Urged by Milbank Fund Official

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP)—John A. Kingsbury, secretary of the Milbank Memorial Fund, issued a statement tonight saying the nation's facilities for medical service and health protection are "grossly inadequate" and outlining a three-point program to meet a situation which he says is "rapidly approaching the dimension of a national health emergency."

"In 40 out of 48 states appropriations for public health have been cut," Kingsbury said. "In some states this cut is one-half. This has created an acute national public health problem."

He called upon leaders of the public health movement to submit to President Roosevelt a remedial plan that could be incorporated in the national recovery plan.

Essentials of a national health plan, the statement said, are "not merely the control of communicable diseases but the full use of all facilities for prevention of physical and mental impairments, medical and dental care and social relief."

Kingsbury proposed three immediate steps, as follows:

"The integration and co-ordination of all federal activities under a single head in one department. This could be accomplished at once under the president's directions with such advisers as he may choose. Later it might be advisable to group all social, educational and welfare activities of the federal government into one department with a cabinet member as its head and assistant secretaries for each of the principal fields of interest."

"The formulation, by the federal head of public health activities, with the counsel of leaders in medicine, public health and social welfare, of a national plan of public health and medical care, for consideration by the president and congress. Such a program should provide for: (1) Co-ordination of federal, state and local functions and activities; (2) Training of necessary administrative and scientific personnel; (3) Setting up standards of efficient administration and evaluation of results, and (4) Efficient use of federal, state and local funds according to needs as determined by health, not political conditions."

"Federal appropriations to supplement state and local funds for community health for medical care of those unable to pay for it, for construction of necessary medical and health facilities where needed, and for education of personnel. The necessity for federal aid cannot be blinked at; it is essential to any effective program. Whatever amount may be estimated as immediately necessary after a careful survey by the federal and state authorities will be almost trifling in comparison with the billions of dollars being expended for rehabilitation and relief."

and accepted by the parties. Sixteen cases were referred to local NRA bodies or the department of labor.

Employer selections to choose representatives were held under board supervision in 23 cases.

"Approximately 70 per cent of all cases coming before the board," said Wagner, "were due to difficulties over recognition of organizations and the exercise of collective bargaining. These figures speak for themselves, as also do those giving the total number of settlements achieved by the board."

Especially noteworthy in regard to the 66 settlements is that much the larger proportion of these were agreements, usually written and signed, and thus bearing promise of permanence. The analysis is worth the consideration of those who want to get at the causes of labor unrest and who wish to gauge the success of the means of adjusting them.

Standards. Simultaneously NRA's consumer advisory board made public a request to the bureau of standards for developing what it described as "over-the-counter" standards for retail goods.

What it wants is a definition of quality and grade so that all goods, no matter whether they are advertised and heavily advertised or not, shall bear a plainly recognized, dependably arrived at, indication of quality. This would apply to a can of tomatoes, a shirt, a rug, or anything that people buy. A glance at the grade mark would tell whether the tomatoes were the best, ripest kind of fruit, whether the shirt or rug contained the grade of cotton, wool, silk or other material that was established to wear the longest.

Goods of second or third grade, the board believes would continue to sell on a price basis. As an example of the practicability of this, its officials frequently refer to the fact that the apple which is advertised in various grades with explanation of the difference between them.

Majority of Papers Favor Recognition of Soviet Union

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 29.—

Recognition of soviet Russia by the United States is favored by 63 per cent of 1,139 daily newspapers of the country, figures compiled by the Committee on Russian-American Relations of the American Foundation for Soviet Studies.

The survey, which was released on the eve of important negotiations between United States and Russian representatives in Washington.

A total of 718 daily papers replied to questions in the affirmative; 23 favored recognition with conditions; 306 are opposed; 79 take no stand on the matter, and 7 gave their views but failed to reply to the inquiry as to whether the question was addressed to the general daily press in all parts of the country.

Recognition, as included in the inquiry, was defined to mean the immediate establishment of diplomatic relations, with agreement to enter upon subsequent negotiations for the adjustment of all outstanding claims and other matters now in dispute between the two countries. The question asked was: "Does your paper favor or oppose the recognition of Russia?"

The definition of recognition on which the inquiry was based simply notes the method of recognition followed in the case of the 25 powers that have already recognized the Soviet Union. In no case has recognition of the union been conditional, although certain general understandings and agreements upon procedure for later adjusting of claims. The Soviet Union has been willing to make arrangements for this kind but has repeatedly shown that any form of conditional recognition is not acceptable.

"The soviet government takes the line that diplomatic recognition is simply the establishment of the machinery for discussion and that recognition and the exchange of ambassadors therefore precede negotiation upon other points," Mr. Bok said. The chairman said the other countries which have recognized the union were in much the same position as the United States and the union itself has expressed willingness to discuss these questions with the United States provided agreements shall apply to both countries.

"A good deal of the uncertainty that has surrounded the question of recognizing Russia has been due to the division of opinion that exists in this country as to what recognition really means, and whether the act of recognition is to be understood merely as the establishing of diplomatic machinery or whether the act of recognition implies endorsement of the constitutionality of the government recognized and approval of its principles. The traditional policy of the United States has followed, with few deviations, is to recognize a de facto government that has been able to maintain order without substantial reliance on its authority."

Mr. Bok continued: "The idea that the establishment of diplomatic relations implies in any degree the relinquishing of United States claims is a failure to give buyers of Cuban bonds sufficient information on the financial condition of the country."

"In the judgment of our committee, a good deal of the uncertainty and confusion that surrounds the question would be removed by a clearer conception of what we mean by recognition."

Other members of the committee are: W. L. Montague, of J. P. Morgan & Co.; William S. C. Wright, Protestant Episcopal bishop coadjutor of Missouri; George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works; David B. Robertson, labor leader; two economists, Professor Frank Taussig, of Harvard University and Professor Jacob Viner, of the University of Chicago; five lawyers and jurists—Roland S. Morris, former ambassador to Japan; Paul D. Cravath, Dean Roscoe Pound, of the Harvard Law School; Professor Walter W. Cook, of the Johns Hopkins University; and Allen Wardwell, General William H. Haskell, of the National War College.

Dr. H. H. Kung, president of the Remington Rand Corporation; Thomas A. Morgan, president of the Curtis-Wright Corporation; Chester Everett Lape, member in charge, President Thomas S. Gates, of the University of Pennsylvania; James D. Mooney, president of the General Motors Corp.; Dr. Walter C. Alvarez, of the Mayo Clinic, and Colonel Hugh L. Cooper, consulting engineer.

U. S. Warns Farmers Of Unofficial Agents

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The farm credit administration today warned farmers against dealing with "unofficial and unauthorized" persons seeking to collect fees or commissions for "the so-called service" of helping them obtain loans from federal land banks.

"No unofficial intermediary is necessary for farmers to make applications for loans and no such person will have any influence upon the amount of the loan which will be made," the administration stated.

ment said, reminding farmers that applications should be made direct to national farm loan associations, to authorized correspondents, to federal land banks, or to the banks themselves.

YALE GRADUATE NAMED CHINA'S FINANCE HEAD

NANKING, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Dr. H. H. Kung, minister of industries in the national government, today was appointed to succeed T. V. Soong, whose resignation as finance minister has been accepted.

Dr. Kung is a graduate of Yale University and Oberlin College.

Soong, a graduate of Harvard and Columbia universities, offered his resignation last week, presumably because of mounting financial difficulties in the government.

FERDINAND A. SILCOX NAMED CHIEF FORESTER

Native of Columbus, Ga., Succeeds Major Robert Y. Stuart.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(UP)—Ferdinand A. Silcox has been appointed chief forester of the United States forest service, effective November 15, succeeding Major Robert Y. Stuart, who fell to death from his office window Monday.

In the early days of the forest service, Silcox was intimately connected with the administration of national forests. Later he interested himself in shipyard labor arbitration problems. He now is director of industrial relations for the New York Employing Printers' Association.

Silcox, a native of Columbus, Ga., and a graduate of the College of Forestry at the University of Georgia, is 50 years old. His connection with the forest service includes service as ranger in the Leadville National Forest, Col.; administrator of the Holy Cross, San Juan and Montezuma National Forests, Colo.; forest inspector in Montana, 1904; associate district forester at Missoula, Mont., 1908; and district forester for the northern Rocky Mountain region, 1911-1917.

During the war Silcox served in the forest engineers branch of the U. S. Forest Service as captain and major. After less than a year's service in this capacity he was sent by the labor department to Washington to handle labor problems. After the war he became connected with the printing industry in Chicago and subsequently in New York.

congeniality of opinions on social and economic questions.

The president emphasized that view in his campaign speeches and he has followed it consistently since he went into the White House.

Those who complain that patronage is being dispensed too slowly are being told that even if it were possible to make the check and double check of support and endorsements upon which Mr. Farley insists, it would not be desirable to have a rapid turnover.

The democrats were out of office for 12 years, and in the meantime all the key positions except those under civil service fell to republicans. A quick turnover, Mr. Farley believes, would be a maladjustment that might react more unfavorably upon the administration than going slowly and "seasoning" persons for key places.

RUSSIA GAINS IN FAVOR

The sweeping change in the attitude of the American public toward the recognition by this government of soviet Russia is revealed in the overwhelming approval manifested by the press of the first step to this end taken in President Roosevelt's letter to President Kalinin.

Up to a year or so ago the average American citizen was opposed to diplomatic recognition of the bolshevik government, largely because of its repudiation of the debts due to this government and to American financial and commercial institutions, and to its alleged attempts to spread the doctrine of bolshevism in the United States.

So well organized and intense was this opposition that during the present year open discussion of recognition subsided, but it is apparent from the reception given to President Roosevelt's move that a major change of public opinion on the subject has been taking place.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, influential midwestern democratic newspaper, echoes the change in public sentiment and points out the grounds upon which recognition can be granted to Russia, despite the conflicting political faiths between the two countries, in an editorial in which it says:

Mr. Roosevelt strikes a happy chord in his Russian note. There is a destiny of nations which transcends all such immediate as that which has estranged the United States and Russia. We bear a prophetic relation to the rest of the world, and so does Russia. It would be to defeat the usefulness of both countries for them to turn their backs upon each other. Far apart as their political theories and practices are, they can still learn from each other. It is a hostile country that interferes with the domestic affairs of another nation, that repudiates its obligations to another nation. It is a friendly country that respects the sovereignty of other nations, their right to their own political theories, the sanctity of their property and nationals. If Russia wants to be friendly to the United States under those conditions, it will take very little time to reach an agreement, and the American people will be glad to applaud it.

The Baltimore Sun, one of the outstanding independent newspapers of the country, feels that the Roosevelt letter is a promising move toward sanity and realism, and holds that "the elimination of the artificial barriers heretofore existing will promote a better economic and political order for the nations concerned and perhaps for the world at large."

The republican Minneapolis Tribune is of the opinion that the matter of trade with Russia is hardly of the importance that has been attached to it, but points out that "the Sino-Japanese difficulties on the Asiatic mainland, and the unrest in Europe, have given Russia and the United States a common political motive which they have not had since the issue of recognition was created."

The Memphis Commercial Appeal differs with its Minneapolis contemporary as to the importance of the increased trade which would follow Russian recognition, holding that "disposal of surplus agricultural products and manufactured articles is of more concern to the people of the United States than the form of government under which Russia chooses to operate."

Commenting that the exchange of letters between Presidents Roosevelt and Kalinin lifts the question of recognition out of the realm of the academic and makes it an imminent possibility, the strongly republican New York Herald Tribune expresses the opinion that "the recognition of a competent and friendly foreign government should not be conditional upon conformity with our moral, religious, political or social standards."

These editorial expressions from outstanding newspapers, both democratic and republican, in every section of the country indicate clearly that Russian recognition will be generally approved, provided adequate agreements are reached concerning bolshevik agitation in the United States and the repudiated debts.

The agitation bugaboo has long since been exploded. If there ever was any serious effort to spread bolshevik propaganda in the United States, the policies adopted at Moscow since Stalin assumed control are definitely against such activities.

With reference to the debts, it is improbable that all of them will ever be paid, but unquestionably there is a willingness now on the part of the soviet leaders to discuss some basis of settlement of the obligations due to business and private interests in America.

With so astute a statesman as Litvinoff coming as the soviet representative in the conferences to be held at Washington, there appears to be, in view of the public reaction to President Roosevelt's letter, little doubt that recognition will be formally announced in the near future.

HARLEM'S FALSE FRONT

Harlem, the particular paradise to which thousands of southern negroes have been attracted during the past decade, is pictured by the New York Herald Tribune as being far from the haven for the oppressed that it is reputed to be by those who seek to entice the negroes away from their homes south of the Mason and Dixon line.

On the other hand, according to this newspaper, it is the "hunger, unhealthiest, most depression-ridden section in Greater New York... and concealed behind its rows of trim houses, and masked by the sartorial splendor of its inhabitants, are more misery and despair than may be found in any other neighborhood of the city."

Harlem is further pictured as "all front and no depth, where clothes are fine, but stomachs are empty"—a condition, as every southerner knows, exactly the reverse of the status of the negro in the south.

Southern negroes may not be well clothed and their homes may be humble, but, taken as a group, they are as well fed as any of the great middle classes of American citizens—a state of affairs that is contributed to very largely by their easy access to the larders of the white people whom so many of the race serve as house servants.

Commenting that "Harlem would probably gladly sell for a song its superficial elegance in exchange for a little cornfield happiness," the Memphis Commercial Appeal goes on to observe—

The southern negro does not put on much of a front. The average raider does not even pretend to approach sartorial elegance, but he is an infinitely happier and less burdened citizen than his brother in Harlem. For most there is work if they care to accept it, and not many of them are really hungry now.

Years of trial and tribulation in the north have convinced thousands of southern negroes that the full dinner pail exists for them nowhere else as it does in this section—and that the fine raiment and other attractions of life for the negro in the great industrial centers do not make up for the contentment, security and solid comfort that is theirs for the asking in the south.

It is typical of the race that, having learned the mistake they have made, they are coming "home" each year by the thousands, and the proof of their wisdom is demonstrated by the warm welcome they are receiving from the "white folks" they deserted for the chimera of wealth in less sympathetic and understanding communities.

Evolution is from a colored shirt to a white collar.

Hitler's Book In America

It is to be hoped that Herr Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," which is about to be published in the United States under the title, "My Task" or "My Combat," will be attentively read by every citizen. It is a book which, provided the whole book is all there, and not merely a few extracts. To offer the American public extracts would be nothing less than deceiving the American public.

In German, the book is tortuous reading. The language is bad, in many places obscure and even incomprehensible. The book teems with such observations as these: "Every German who is born within the German community is a German, whether he likes it or not. He is one with that community and the interests of the community are his. With this conception I destroy at one blow the idea of class differences."

It would indeed be wonderful if the mere word of Hitler, who has destroyed class differences in Germany and anywhere else. Alas, the truth is otherwise. Surely, all Germans are equal before the law, but the law and both Herr Krupp von Bohlen and Hans Schmidt, the unemployed worker of Berlin-Wedding are forbidden to sleep under the bridge or steal a loaf of bread and it is no difficulty at all for Herr Krupp to stay within the law. It might be different with Hans Schmidt, though. To Americans who know France and there are many thousands, the remarks by Herr Hitler, in the German version of "Mein Kampf," on the subject of the French as a negro people must come somewhat as a surprise. Or that declaration that "Jews have no art" at a moment when a French literary work comes to the conclusion that of the twenty greatest painters now living, nineteen are Jews, including the man who is hailed the greatest painter of modern Germany.

Debate on Russia.

Gareth Jones, former secretary to Lloyd George and Hamilton Fyfe, the distinguished writer, debated the question of Russia on the motion "that communism has failed to benefit the population of Russia before the outbreak of the civil war in 1917."

The main results of the collectivization policy on the farms had been famine, contended Mr. Jones. Famine had been accompanied by a catastrophic decrease in the number of cattle. "Land, bread and liberty," in these words were the recurrent theme of the peasant's complaint. He was revolted by the attitude of the liberal press in England, for he considered that the oppression of the kulak has not only been very brutal, but a terrible loss to Russian agriculture.

Hamilton Fyfe said he did not believe a word of the famine stories. Politically, he thought much the same as before the revolution, but in the matter of police administration there had been drastic changes. A man now entered the army as one would go to a university. The old brutality was no more. The army was a school and a very valuable school. The tyranny of the church of a degraded superstition had also gone. Down in the Ukraine, he said, where before the revolution they were always on the boil, they were now perfectly contented. So says Hamilton Fyfe.

Personally, I would add this: one thing I saw particularly well in Russia, and that was the condition of the Ukraine. I traveled there just before the general order came through forbidding foreign correspondents to continue their work in the Ukraine. My impression was that the Ukraine is the most dangerous part of the union in so far as Moscow is concerned. There is a strong anti-Communist feeling current in the Ukraine, and it is partly Trotskyist and partly nationalist. But that they are perfectly content in a land where there has just been a terrible famine for five years is no question of this is going a little too far. I don't say the bolsheviks inflicted the famine on the population. Nevertheless, it is their policy which brought it about.

THE CAUSES OF CVD.

Cardiovascular degeneration or disease as CVD is called, is a disease of the arteries, myocardium or slow heart muscle failure, angina pectoris, many cases of apoplexy (cerebral hemorrhage, stroke or paralysis) and many cases of chronic nephritis (Bright's disease). Besides this general condition embraces a good many cases of "general breakdown" where the body is in a state of chronic degeneration. In one of these more familiar manifestations, CVD now tops the list in the causes of death. Nearly all of us who live long enough to die of it, if we live long enough.

What we doctors don't know about the causes of CVD fills many tomes. When we don't know much we always lean heavily on theory. Before we consider the nature and cause of the condition we had better dispose of one or two false conceptions based on exploded theories.

First, the old saying that a man is as good as dead as soon as his arteries are unduly upon the arteries. Of course, a man or a woman or a child is as old as his arteries or his muscles or his lungs or his teeth. If he is old, it is because his arteries are old, his hair is gray because the hair is old.

Second, the theory that too much meat hardens the arteries, the blood pressure or something. This theory was based on another theory, that animal protein or nitrogenous matter (albumen, lean meat) more really undergoes putrefaction in the intestine and that the products of putrefaction are more or less poisonous and are absorbed into the blood and produce a kind of poison or of the system called "auto-intoxication." I assure you this is all a mistake. Scientifically no such systemic poisoning has been demonstrated. Practically, experimentally, the excessive consumption of meat by man has proved quite harmless. So I assert without fear of competent contradiction that there is no reason why CVD patients or persons training for cardiovascular degeneration should not eat meat, light meat, dark meat, fish, fowl, eggs, cheese, game.

Third, the overeating idea—mind I don't all overeating a theory. There is, I believe, good reason to think that one who regularly eats more than he can metabolize to advantage (and this includes vitamins and beverages), does put a load, a strain, a burden on his heart and arteries and courts a premature physical decline, breakdown, degeneration. As a rule, persons who overeat perform their outstanding feats in the domain of the delectable carbohydrates, starches, sugars, breads, cakes, pastries, sweets—because these are the easiest to eat and most available. Frankly I don't know whether overeating has anything to do with CVD or not, but most good physicians still feel that it may be a factor. Perhaps the real factor concerned where

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon

RE-DEAL WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The best financial advisory service told its customers confidentially last week that the conservative phase of the new deal was over.

It prophesied the expansion of stronger socialistic policies from now on. That is only half of it.

The new deal appears to have undergone a complete transition on the inside during the past two weeks. It is not discernible to the naked eye. Officials are trying to gloss it over. They are announcing alterations in policy piecemeal. They want to make it look as if they had these things in mind all the time.

Actually the transition appears to be a fundamental change in basic strategy. It is a new deal.

NRA You can see it in the new NRA policy. The original mistake of trying to get every crossroads grocery into the scheme has been rectified in the new retail code. The Blue Eagle no longer blankets its country. Its talons cling only to towns of more than 2,500 population and to merchants employing more than five persons. There is one exception. That is the chain store.

It means the NRA is no longer all for one and one for all. It is one for the big fellow, and all for the little fellow.

FARM The same thing has happened on the inside of the farm program. A stronger price boosting policy is being effected with even smoother guile.

A few weeks ago the officials announced they would make 10-cent loans on cotton, then selling below that figure. It was not a change in policy of course. Just a little assistance to the downtrodden cotton farmer.

A few days ago they announced 50-cent loans on corn. The same alibis were offered.

Then came hints that perhaps similar loans would be made on sugar, peanuts, beans and dairy products.

The truth is that behind these individual helpful steps is a concerted new movement to raise the price of all farm products through making loans on them above the prevailing market price.

It cannot be concealed much longer. The next announcement will probably admit it.

WHITHER Anyone with half an eye open can see where we are being led. The basis for determining the course Mr. Roosevelt is charting is trial and error. Every time a trial develops an error, another step is taken toward the left.

You cannot accurately call it a step toward socialism, radicalism, dictatorship. All those old terms are obsolete. A new word is needed to describe it. The best probably would be "Rooseveltism."

That seems to mean a very practical and restrained radicalism which is something Webster (unabridged) never thought of and Funk and Wagnall never heard of.

It has no limits or doctrines, but only an objective.

MONEY Mr. Roosevelt was very conservative in his dollar devaluation at the start.

The value of the free moving dollar abroad was as low as 63 cents two weeks before the president took hold of it by bidding up gold prices. However, it was 69.4 cents the day before he started. His first gold bid was equivalent to devaluing the dollar to 65.9. The second bid brought the dollar down to a theoretical value of 65.6 and the third to 65.1.

He has very craftily concealed his objective but the smart boys think they have figured it out.

They predict a 50-cent dollar about November 20. They do not believe Mr. Roosevelt will try to bid it any lower than that through the gold price medium. If that level fails to bring the price objective he desires, then he probably will take other means.

FORD There are inner indications that General Johnson is being physically held away from Henry Ford like a bulldog on a leash.

Apparently the leash is in the hands of the president. At the White House there seems to be considerable respect for Ford's standing and popularity in certain sections of the country.

All signs indicate the administration will not back down, but that it will proceed with extra caution so as to be sure of its ground. It cannot afford to make a mistake.

CORRECTIONS To keep the record straight, the following facts should be cited, correcting material in recent columns. All were discovered by readers who let nothing pass. (1) The railroad which was double-tracked by the Russians is not the Manchurian but the Trans-Siberian; (2) The Cummings criticized by the federal reserve council was Treasury Secretary Woodin's assistant and not the attorney-general; (3) The profit to be made from a 40 cent devaluation would be 66-2-3 cents and not 40 cents on each dollar for those who fled abroad with dollars.

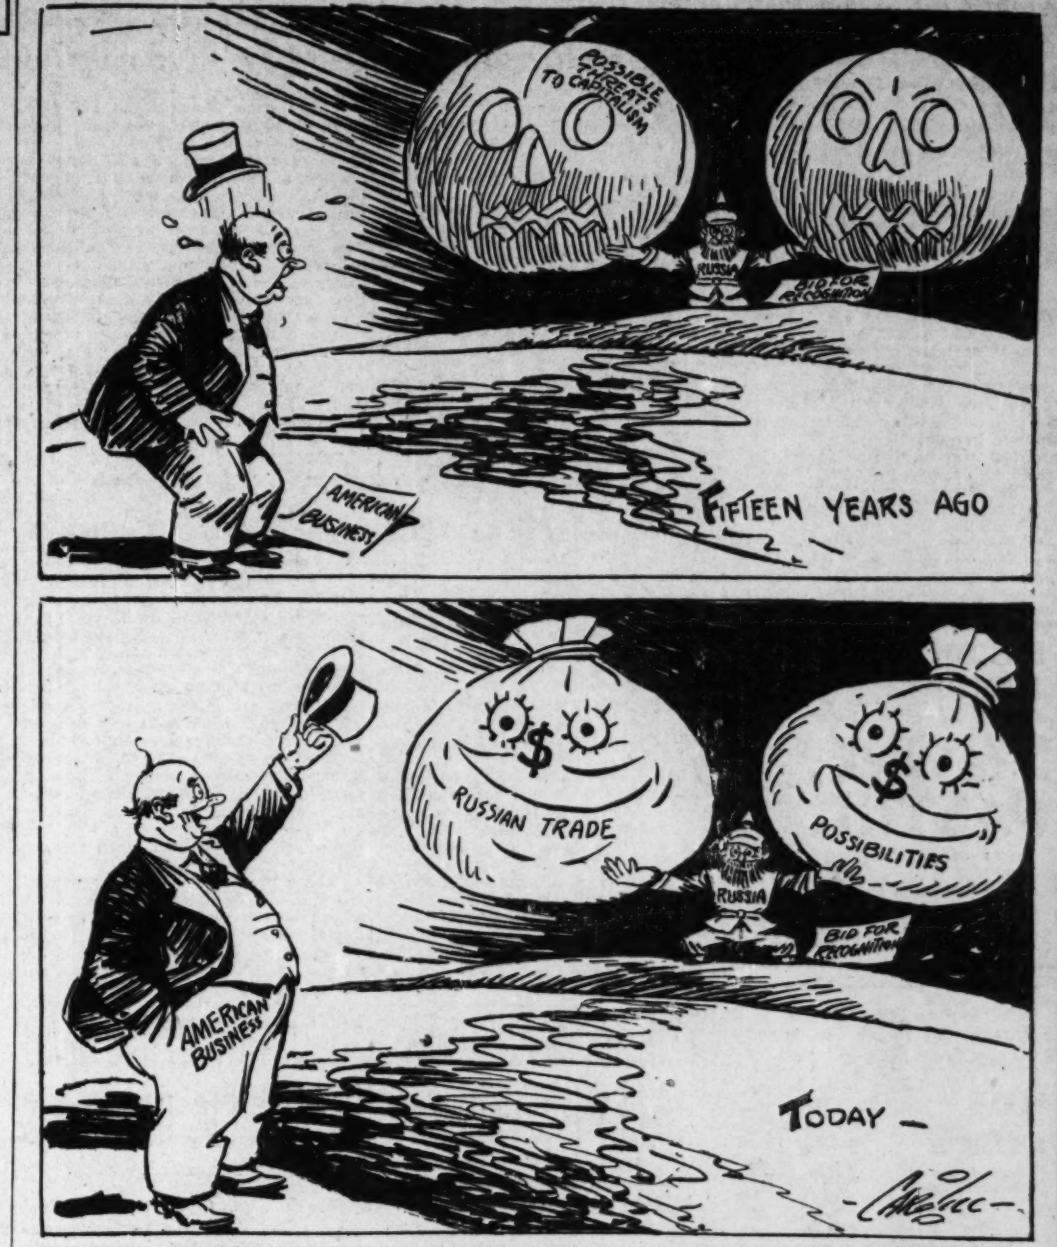

NOTES The unfortunately raised Jewish issue will cut no ice in the New York city election. Prominent Jews are on both sides.

That must have been a republican young lady who swam to shore from Alcazar prison a few days after General Cummings announced it could not be done. At least they suspect at the justice department that either a republican or a publicity man put her up to it.

There are apparently credible reports around in the best sugar circles that a reorganization is imminent in the sugar institute.

16 Pairs Survive Qualifying Rounds In Constitution Bridge Tournament

With a score of 378 1-2 points, Jack Faugh and Whitner Cary led the field in the qualifying rounds of The Constitution-Henry Grady Bridge Club contract bridge tournament which finished the third session Saturday night.

In second place came the strong mother and son pair of Mrs. J. T. Daniel and Don Daniel, with 370 1-2 points while third place fell to Mrs. Gladys Peabody and Harold Dillon, with 365 points. The remaining pairs to fill the 16 places which compose the field for the main tournament to be played sometime in November are as follows:

Mrs. George Black and Frank Smith, 362; Mrs. Aline Phelan and Sam Maddox, 351; Al Walton and Dr. Lynn Fort Jr., 350; Martin May and Charlie May, 349 1-2; T. E. Tolleson and Bob Mayhew, 341 1-2; Mrs. Humphrey Vagar and Fred Levy, 337; Smith and Carmichael, 334 1-2; Erskine Jones and Wally Screws, 334; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Thompson, 332; Mr. and Mrs. L. Porter, 330; Dr. J. C. Wood and John Marshall, 329; Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale and Bill Meador, 329; Mrs. Lewis Hamilton and Fred Shaffer, 327 1-2; Dr. Clark and Lewis Hamilton, 327.

The last two pairs tied for the sixteenth place and this tie will be broken this week.

The three qualifying rounds went off in splendid fashion and reflected great credit on the management of the tournament, which was under the direction of Ed Nix, ably assisted by E. N. Claughton and Lewis Lassiter. The fine beginning speaks volumes for the remaining sessions of the pair and the individual tournament.

The latter will start with qualifying rounds on Friday night, Saturday afternoon and Saturday night of this week. The transformation started with individual complete every contestant to play with every other entrant in the tournament it is an extremely popular style of play.

There is no better schooling for the ambitious bridge player than to take part in one of these individual affairs. Watch The Constitution from day to day for further information concerning this event.

Reports of Girl Changing to Man Denied by California Parents

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 29.—(UP)—Mystery today surrounded the strange case of a 23-year-old Oakland girl who is reported to be changing from woman to man.

The two doctors at the hospital were authority for the original story concerning the girl, whose characteristics were predominantly feminine at one time. The transformation started about two years ago, they said, when the girl was a blonde. Her hair turned to a coarse brown and her shoulders became mannishly square.

"Miss X," as she is referred to by the physicians, said that she had become increasingly interested in sports, especially tennis, golf and swimming. Her muscular development during the last two years has been of a pronounced masculine tendency.

One of the physicians declared vehemently that, "I will never make another statement about that girl if I live to be 100 years old."

The girl's parents, however, insist that she was taken to the hospital for observation of a goiter, that an operation had been considered unnecessary.

Not until people comprehend that religion, if it is anything, must be everything, can they conceive of life as the daily practice of the presence of God. Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, told a radio audience Sunday morning in the course of a sermon broadcast over station WGST.

Dr. Newton based his comment on a stanza of Browning's "The Rabbi's Song" which Miss Martha Berry sent him and requested that he read. The line in the stanza—"Our times are at hand"—prompted Dr. Newton to emphasize the omnipotence of God, as the thought is defined in the Bible.

Dr. Newton said that by every-day religion he understood that people were laying claim to the promise of Jesus on his disciples on a mountain slope in Galilee after the resurrection. "I am with you always, even unto the end of the age."

There are five aspects of "this great promise," he said: the assurance that the presence is God; the assurance that the promise is to those who will go "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you;" the assurance that the promise covers all places; that the presence is perpetual, and finally, the assurance that when "this age is ended we shall then behold Him face to face."

"That we see," said Dr. Newton, "that if our trust is in God, we can never be alone... And with this assurance of His presence, we need have no fear as to our equipment and power. We do not know where He will send us, but we know He will not send us anywhere without first preparing that place for our coming and second, we will wish to serve Him, even as He served when He was walking the dusty roads of Galilee."

Large crowds attend First Sunday Movies

Large crowds at the most optimistic theater manager anticipated celebrated the inauguration of Sunday motion pictures Sunday afternoon and evening, and contributed admissions to the aggregate of $40,000, a handsome amount of money for the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

Despite threats heard in some quarters that persons antagonistic to Sunday showings would seek injunctions, no formal objection interfered with thousands of Atlantans who took advantage of the fine weather on a mountain and thronged picture houses along Peachtree and Whitehall and Forsyth streets.

Sol A. Rosenblatt, national compliance head of the NRA in charge of all amusements, who is here for conferences with members of the Atlanta Theater Managers Association, observed the public response with interest.

SUPERVISORS NAMED IN BANKING PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(P)—The appointment of 12 supervisors and special state committees to carry out the administration's effort to strengthen the capital structure of the 9,000 banks which are not members of the federal reserve system was announced today by Harvey Couch, a director of the Reconstruction Corporation.

The committees will seek to obtain the closest possible co-operation between all state and governmental agencies in the purchase of preferred stock from the RFC. The object is to assist state non-member banks in qualifying for federal insurance of deposits and to make it possible for them to extend local credit in the recovery program.

The 12 supervisors, one for each federal reserve district, will be ready to serve banks at the various reserve centers tomorrow. State supervisors have been designated for every state capital where they will co-operate with representatives of the federal insurance deposit commission and RFC examiners in informing banks of the preferred stock law. At least two leading non-member bankers are being invited to serve with these men as a special committee.

Federal insurance of deposits up to $25,000 becomes effective January 1. The list of district supervisors, state supervisors, federal insurance deposit commission RFC representatives includes:

REVIEWING THE SHOWS

Night Club Is Setting
For Comedy at Georgia

Life behind the scenes in the New York night clubs furnishes the atmosphere for the pleasing comedy, "Ladies Must Love," which is playing for three days at Keith's Georgia theater.

If you like pretty blondes, neat legs, and are at all curious as to the low-down on the borderland ladies known as "gold diggers," you'll like "Ladies Must Love."

June Knight takes the lead as Jeannie Marlowe, entertainer at the Old Fuzzy Club, but of course it wouldn't do to let the heroine continue to earn an honest living. Just at the inopportune moment Jeannie loses her job, but there's a man—case of real love—in the office, and things don't look so bad until Jeannie's three colleagues lure her into a profit-sharing merger by the terms of which all sugar-papas, honest salaries and other emoluments of the profession are to be split four ways. Jeannie lends the first job, and, incidentally, the first man. Being a gentleman, the leading man, portrayed by Neil Hamilton, feels somewhat aggrieved when he stumbles upon the

'The Green Pastures' Opens Week
At Erlanger Theater Tonight

"The Green Pastures," with a cast of 122 people and with stage settings that require a full day's work by 30 stage hands to erect, will start its engagement of one week at the Erlanger theater tonight.

The production here is exactly the same as that which originally appeared in the play in New York, with one exception. The portrayal of the character "Gabriel" is the third to take this part, the first having died and the second retired of his own desire.

The play, as everyone knows, is the depiction of the Old Testament stories and of Heaven as it is conceived in the mind of the average ignorant negro in the country regions of the deep south. It was written by Marc Connelly from the book "Old Man Adam and His Chillin'" which was written by Roark Bradford, well known delineator of negro character and a former Atlanta newspaper man.

fact that he is being thus sordidly used, Jeannie goes conscientious and retrieves his diamond bracelet from the hookshop, where it has been placed by her scheming girl friends. The document which was the reason of her being the piece is explained away as a joke, and a happy reconciliation is effected.

Although lacking anything which might be termed a climax, "Ladies Must Love" is, relatively speaking, good entertainment. Carl Laemmle is rather stingy with some really excellent music.

A lively comedy, with Andy Clyde, a thrilling Tarzan episode, and Pathe newreel complete the program.

Sally Eilers Stars
In "Walls of Gold"

When patrons of moving pictures leave wearing pleased little smiles, that means the show they have seen is due to draw good crowds, according to many experts. Just such little wistful grins twinkled on the faces of people leaving the Paramount Theater Saturday after viewing "Walls of Gold," starring Sally Eilers and Norman Foster.

The show is distinctly good entertainment of the melodrama brand, light enough yet with a few touches of pathos truly characteristic of Kathleen Norris, from whose book by the same name the show was filmed.

Sally Eilers is a capable business girl who knows how to combine work and pleasure. One is shown that most wonderful seeds—our hero, Norman Foster, off to marry Sally's sister.

Sally marries Foster's uncle, the

There is a choir of 40 voices in the company, which sings the spirituals and hymns common among colored people. Among the best known scenes in the play are the launching of the Ark, the Fish Ery in Heaven and the court of King Pharaoh.

Seats are priced at extremely low rates and the advance sale has been heavy. So heavy in fact that Manager Lewis Hanse on Friday issued an urgent warning to people who want to be sure of seats for any of the eight performances of the week to make their reservations at once.

There has also been a large mail order sale, seats being secured by people from all sections of Georgia, from Alabama, Florida and South Carolina.

There will be performances every night at 8:30 and matinees on Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30. The box office opens daily at 10 o'clock.

A luxurious house makes the setting for the dramatic scenes. There is a large swimming pool, lavish display, a gun-toting betrayed girl, and Argentine dancer, a calm wife and so on to furnish the anti-climax.

The climax is the tear-jerking, yet humorous big scene, with the boy and girl happily married. It is most certainly a good picture for troubled people to see in troublous times.

Bob Hess at the organ and short subjects complete an above the average bill.

'East of Fifth Avenue'
Pleases Rialto Patrons

"East of Fifth Avenue," an intriguing story of a brownstone New York boarding house, is the feature picture this week at the Rialto theater, but for the benefit of hundreds of Atlantans who have a taste for the merry, that famous cartoon "Three Little Pigs" (whence came the big bad wolf) is one of the short subjects.

Wallace Ford, a pleasant faced young chap who resembles Jimmy Dunn, and Dorothy Tree, of stage fame but new to the screen, have the principal roles and they handle them very well, taking all things into consideration. Lucian Littlefield is good in his part as Mary Carlisle, Louise Carter and Walter Connolly, who are members of the supporting cast.

Miss Tree has a difficult part to portray—not that it is so exacting in itself but the role is one which needs a touch of delicacy in handling. (She's the girl who wakes up one morning to find herself "in trouble.") The story is rather unusual and the directors certainly spared no effort to squeeze out the last drop of drama from a number of scenes.

"East of Fifth Avenue" is filmed almost entirely within the walls of the boarding house and all the typical boarding house people are in it—even to the fellow who is way behind with his rent. It might give a touch of nostalgia to many persons in the audience.

"The Three Little Pigs," a color cartoon, is playing its third engagement in Atlanta and the big bad wolf seems just as popular as ever.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(UP)—Vessels between Jamaica and central and western Cuba were warned tonight by the weather bureau of a tropical storm now about 60 miles northwest of Negri Point, Jamaica. The disturbance is moving north-northwestward about 5 miles an hour and is attended by shifting gales near its center, the bureau advised. Apparently it is of small diameter.

Mr. Newell was accompanied here by three members of his staff, Frank R. Pierce, sales manager; W. D. McKinnay, commercial division manager, and Lee A. Clark, sales promotion manager.

Rockefeller Foundation
Spent 11 Million in '32

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The Rockefeller Foundation, announcing total appropriations of $11,577,064 were made during 1932, said tonight that it was impressed with the importance of research in the field of economic stabilization.

"Much physical illness, mental disorder, family disintegration, crime, and political and social instability trace their origins to economic causes," the report said. "In a time of depression, when millions of unemployed are unable to command the necessities of life, there is the incessant question as to why this distressing situation arises in a country where raw materials are plentiful, where technological equipment is of the best, and where workers are eager to apply their productive capacities."

"The Foundation, although not itself a research agency in the social sciences, is impressed with the importance of research in this field. It therefore seeks to strengthen existing institutions which are collecting and appraising basic information and to assist in advancing particular studies which deal with problems of economic stabilization."

The total amount appropriated in 1932 for work in the social sciences, the report said, was $2,622,567.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

"I know of no sport," says Erich Hagenlocher, "that places a greater strain on the nerves than tournament billiards. The slightest inaccuracy, the most fractional miscalculation can ruin an important run. If I were asked to give one simple rule for success, I should say, 'Watch your nerves!' That's why I smoke Camels, and have smoked them for years. I like their taste better and they're milder. But more than that, they never upset my nervous system, and believe me, I smoke plenty."

There is a difference between Camel's costlier tobaccos and the tobaccos used in other popular cigarettes. You'll notice the difference in taste and in mildness—and Camels never jangle your nerves. You can prove this yourself. Begin today!

Army Challenges for Honors

GEORGIA, DUKE PACE LEADERS IN FAST RACE

Michigan, Fordham, Nebraska Make Strong Bids for Supremacy.

By Herbert W. Barker,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Hitherto badly under-rated in a topsy-turvy season that already has installed an almost complete new set of favorites to replace the old, Army's golden-helmeted football warriors have risen today to challenge Michigan, Fordham, Georgia, Princeton, Nebraska, Duke and Holy Cross in the lead to the mythical national championship.

Behind a comparatively light but aggressive and fast-charging line, a fine array of backs, led by Texas Jack Buckner and Paul Johnson, have carried the Cadets to five successive victories and threaten now to hand Georgia an entirely unexpected present of an undefeated season in its first year as head coach.

Despite the graduation of most of last year's fine team and a woeful lack of capable reserves, Davidson has developed a powerful array that swept past its first two major opponents, Illinois and Yale, in impressive fashion and seems an almost certain winner over its three remaining big-time rivals, Harvard, Notre Dame and Navy.

The Cadets' smashing 21-0 conquest of Yale's hitherto undefeated Bulldogs was one of the high-spots of October's final football fight yesterday. The Army forwards have carried the wide open while Buckner's accurate passing on the dead run was a major cause for the decisiveness of the Eli defeat.

All the other leaders kept pace in a day remarkable for the scarcity of upsets. Michigan, still the team to beat for the Big Ten title and a formidable contender for national honors as well, uncorked its devastating attack in two periods to crush Chicago, 28-0.

BAMA OUTPLAYED.
Fordham, under Jimmy Crowley, outplayed Alabama all the way but won by the scant margin of 2-0, the result of an automatic safety on a punt Americano Sarno, sophomore tackle, blocked in the first period.

Princeton likewise overturned a southern team, Yale, 6-0, to protect its unbeaten record but the Tigers were outplayed most of the way. Georgia's all-conquering Bulldogs returned the compliment by routing New York university under a 25-0 count.

Nebraska, Big Six power for many years, stepped closer to another conference title by routing Oklahoma, 16-7, while Wallace Wade's Duke Blue Devils overthrew Kentucky, 14-7. Speed and deception, rather than the weight advantage on which they had relied, carried Holy Cross to a convincing 19-7 triumph over Brown and established the Crusaders as a foe to be feared all along the line.

Although it outscored the south three victories to two, offsetting N. Y. U.'s defeat and Georgetown's reverse at the hands of William & Mary, 12-6, with the Princeton and Fordham triumphs and Western Maryland's conquest of Maryland, 13-7, the east got only an even break in intercollegiate tests with the mid-west. Pitt's Panthers, who stood in Minnesota a week ago, outplayed Notre Dame's disappointing Ramblers and won 14-0 with Mike Sebastian, shifty backfield leader, the way. The mid-west countered, however, with a surprising rout of Syracuse's previously unbeaten Orange by Michigan State, 27-3.

IOWA LOSER.
The Big Ten race lost one contender when Iowa's Hawkeyes bowed to Minnesota, 19-7, leaving the fight now to the Gophers, Michigan, Purdue and Illinois. The clash of Michigan and Illinois should remove one of these three, in all probability, Illinois. Purdue handed Wisconsin an even beating, 14-0, while Ohio State capitulated in two breaks, beat Northwestern, 12-0, chiefly because of the fine punting of John Kabealo.

Nebraska's triumph over Oklahoma came with Kansas' defeat by Kansas State, 6-0, just as it clinched the Big Six title for Nebraska. The Cornhuskers meet Missouri's oft-beaten outfit this week and Kansas next to wind up their conference program. Only Cotton Warburton, 60-year-old, has run in the fourth period since Southern California from its first defeat in 27 games last year. The victory gave the Trojans a 6-3 verdict over California. Continuing along the Pacific Coast conference championship fight with Southern California were Washington State, 2-0, Stanford led by the way, and Washington, 13-0, which won by a 90-minute limit, two falls to three. The show opens at 8 o'clock.

Pancho Villa, from Mexico City, Mexico, will make his bow in Atlanta in one of the feature matches. Villa has wrestled in many parts of the United States and should extend his opponent, Jack Doyle, to the limit. Doyle is a favorite with fans because of his unusual style and his famous "kangaroo kick."

A war of soldiers will take place in the other headline, "United States Military Academy at West Point, scheduled to take on Sergeant Harry Nern. The sergeant has had a long term of service in the regular army and is now on a leave of absence from his station at Fort Myers, Fla.

Wild Bill Collins and Gentleman John Mauldin are booked for the preliminary, one-hour limit. Collins and Mauldin are of the same rough school of wrestling and should heat up the air before one of them wins.

Sington Sees Auburn As Menace to Duke

Wade Also Was Considerably Worried About Kentucky, Freddy Reveals.

By Jimmy Jones.
Big Freddy Sington, wearing a collegiate blue sweater and making occasional notes on a scouting pad, sat in the press box at Chapel Hill Saturday afternoon and looked upon the maneuvering of two football teams which Duke University will have to conquer to go through the season with a spotless record.

Freddy, who is Wallace Wade's assistant at Duke and his trusted scout, had considerable to keep his mind occupied. Occasional vague reports that trickled over the wires indicated that the University of Kentucky was giving Freddy's adopted school an awful battle.

Out there on the field a young man with a strong arm, one Don Jackson, of Sanford, Fla., was holding Georgia Tech's feet to the fire with a series of long passes that soared over the heads of Tech's bewildered and somewhat flat defense, threatening to play havoc with the Jackets in the last five minutes of play.

"I don't know about this football business this year," mused Freddy, after Tech had finally squeaked the ubiquitous Tarheels and made the game safe for the records.

"You see what happened out there today? Tech was a little flat and Carolina was keyed up, playing by far its best game of the season. We have to play both of those teams, not to mention Auburn on next Saturday and we still have a chance to get bumped."

KERCHEVAL'S TOE.
Sington intimated that Wallace Wade was more worried about the Kentucky game Saturday than he had indicated in statements. The Kentucky team is a curious football team and one which causes the southern coaches considerable concern, due mainly to their knowledge of the fact that so long as a kicker like Kercheval is in there booting the ball with two good ends covering, anything can happen.

Duke escaped from the game, 14 to 7, and Sington was vastly relieved. "Coach Wade worried a great deal about the game; he figured that if we won it we would be over the hump," he realized the Kercheval in view of Duke's hard game with Tennessee and the fact that some of the backs were not in the best of shape."

"The Duke-Kentucky game was close, very close. It was a 7-7 tie until the last period, the Wade team getting their score after a fumble by the Wildcats.

"Sington would like very much to see the Duke-Wade team, who was fourth team to the Rose Bowl. He went there three times with Alabama and got a great record with two victories and one tie. The Duke team was close, very close. It was a 7-7 tie until the last period, the Wade team getting their score after a fumble by the Wildcats.

"We're hopeful but we're not counting on our chances," said Sington. He is content to see Wade having a good season.

Sington had a word of praise for Jack Phillips, Tech's kicker, who was teamed up with Freddie Crawford, Duke's star tackle, at McCallie school in Chattanooga, a well known incubator of football stars. Crawford and Phillips had both played in the town, Waynesville, N. C.

"Bobby Dodd has improved Phillips as a passer since I last saw him play," Sington commented.

The superb handling of Tarheel punts by Skipper Roberts also caught Freddy's eye. The Carolina linemen were swarming all over Skipper all afternoon, but he took practically every one of Woolen's kicks on the fly and always managed to fight his way back to an advantageous position, although he was being man-handled right and left by tacklers.

Sington also had a lot of praise for George Barclay, Carolina's fine guard and Daniels, their alert center. But for Carolina's inspired line play Tech might have run the score up, as it was, Chick Galloway had to bat down a last-minute pass over Tech's goal line to save the game.

The teaming of the small assemblage of Tech supporters were beating away over the goal line, straight into the arms of George Barclay and Dick Hadley. He caught it, the score would have been 12-10, Carolina, since time had practically run out.

As for Coach Alexander, he couldn't say much for the way his team played. The offense never looked impressive and the defense against the passes was erratic. He was exceedingly glad when Robert let Dave Wilcox kick a field goal on fourth down to start the final period, despite the fact that the ball was not in perfect position for the kick.

"Wilcox is fairly accurate from that distance and I thought he should have tried a kick in the Tulane game after Jack Phillips' long run," Coach Alex stated. At any rate the Texas

Tech High, Proviso Play At Ball Park on Friday

Tech High and Proviso High, of Chicago, will play one of the few prep intercollegiate football games of the year when they meet Friday night at Ponce de Leon park. Tech High defeated Proviso last year in Chicago.

Other games for the week include Proviso High and Marist College, Thursday night at Ponce de Leon, G. M. A. and Baylor Saturday in Chattanooga, Decatur and Gainesville, Friday in Gainesville; Russell and North Fulton Friday at Fort Point, and Fulton High at Griffin, Friday, University School and Commercial have an open date and will likely arrange a game.

Proviso High is undefeated in six games and has scored 100 points against 6 for their opponents. Only Roosevelt High has scored against the Chicago eleven, which has failed to score less than two touchdowns in each game.

PROVISO STRONGER.
According to reports from Chicago, Proviso has a much stronger team than that which lost to one touchdown to the Smiths last year. Nine veterans from last year have returned for the 1933 team. The line will average 170 pounds and the backs will average 160 pounds.

Tech High showed considerable improvement in its game with Charlotte High Saturday afternoon according to reports from the game. The Smiths were favored to lose by several touch-

SOUTH CAROLINA DUKE SHARING LEADING ROLE

Blue Devils Defend Perfect Record Against Kentucky.

By Joseph E. Nettles,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 29.—(AP)—After twice knocking off championship contenders, South Carolina's aggressive Gamecocks today shared with Duke's Blue Devils the top rung in the South Carolina ladder.

The Gamecocks, who blasted Clemson's title bid in the state fair game at Columbia, upset Virginia Tech's Gobblers at Blacksburg yesterday with a dazzling and devastating running attack.

While the South Carolinians were turning in their 12-0 victory, Duke was defending its perfect record by defeating a stubborn University of Kentucky eleven, 14 to 7, with a last period touchdown.

KERCHEVAL STARS.
With Ralph Kercheval playing brilliantly, Kentucky tried hard to avenge its defeat but Duke's superior attack crashed through early in the final period and Bob Cox crossed the goal for his second touchdown of the afternoon. The Blue Devils were headed for another score when the game ended.

Meanwhile, in one of the finest exhibitions of the day, Washington and Lee's brilliant eleven lost a 6-0 decision to a Princeton team that was outplayed most of the way. After scoring in the first period the Tigers spent much of their energies staving off repeated thrusts deep in their own territory. On one occasion Joe Savers, speedy Washington, crashed over the goal line, picked up a fumbled pass and raced 7 yards across the goal line. The referee ruled that the pass was a forward, not a lateral, and brought the ball back.

There was praise aplenty for two other Southern conference teams which took kickings from superior foes Saturday. Washington and Lee's eleven went scoreless into the fourth period, but they came back to win a 13-0 victory over a fighting Clemson team.

UPSET.
In the only startling upset on the afternoon card, Virginia Military's eleven, who had won a 13-0 victory over the University of Virginia Cavaliers with Quarterback Billy Smith engineering the third period comeback, lost to a team that scored the Cadet touchdowns.

BEARS RALLY TO WIN, 14 TO 10
CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—(UP)—Another flaming last-period rally enabled the Chicago Bears, national professional football champions, to come from behind today to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 14 to 10, in a spectacular game which had a crowd of 28,000 persons on their feet cheering wildly at the finish.

It was the Bears' sixth straight victory and the fifth time in six games they have come from behind to win in the last few minutes of play. Bill Hewitt, the hawk-like end of the Chicago team, was the day's hero, overshadowing Harry Newman, of New York, and every other player on the field. He scored the tying touchdown on a 10-yard pass that won the game in the last five minutes of play.

DODGERS WIN.
NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(UP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Chicago Cardinals, 7-0, in a National league football game at Ebbets field.

The score came in the second period, when a sustained march from midfield rolled the ball to Chicago's 22-yard line. A pass, Friedman to Riblett, put the ball on the 12-yard line and, when the Cardinals failed to pass, Friedman faked back and passed to Douglas, who stepped across for the score. Friedman's place-kick was good.

PIRATES VICTORIOUS.
BOSTON, Oct. 29.—(UP)—Outplayed and outgained in every quarter, the Pittsburgh Pirates cashed in on two long-scoring passes and a field goal to score an upset victory over the Boston Redskins, 16 to 14, here today, in a National Professional Football league game.

Boston scored in the first two minutes of play, when MacMurdo blocked Westfall's punt on the Pitt 20-yard line, Johnson recovering to place the Redskins in scoring position the second play of the game. Battles carried around his right end for the touchdown, Musick converting.

ONE FOR PACKERS.
GREEN BAY, Wis., Oct. 29.—(UP)—The Green Bay Packers, of the National Professional Football league, defeated the Philadelphia Eagles, 35 to 9, before 4,000 persons here today.

Steve Hanson, former Temple ace, set the pace for Philadelphia until the Eagle defense collapsed.

PRO TUTOR.
Gwinna Henry, W. H. (Lone Star) Diets and "Pot" Clark, former head football coaches at midwestern universities, are tutoring professional eleven.

TO NAME CAPTAIN.
Washington University of St. Louis will choose its 1933 football captain at the end of the season from among nine single-game leaders named by Coach Chile Walsh.

A Double Robbery.

BY ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

It has always been a part of the smart card player's repertoire to "sneak" a necessary trick early in the play of a hand before the defending team can easily ascertain the true nature of his honor-trick holding and distribution. The following hand I saw played recently in a game at a Bridge club in New York City. The beauty of it lies in the fact that the Declarer had to steal not only one trick, but two. This sort of swindle is dangerous, but is worth attempting when failure means suffering only an extra hundred points in penalties, and success results in making a game worth over 400 points.

1—There is hardly a rebid here, but South is forced to give up.
2—Fully justified. South had a maximum one-trump Takeout.
3—On the theory that three trumps are almost as easy as two trumps.

West opened the seven of diamonds, which Dummy's Queen held. South needed another diamond trick as well as a trick in hearts and one in spades to make his contract. He saw a chance if he could sneak through the adverse Aces while the adversaries still saw their greatest possibility in establishing their diamond suit; but he had wisely put Dummy in the lead on the first trick, and could not return to his hand without giving away his possession of a solid club suit. If he led a heart from the doubleton Queen, he was reasonably sure that the Ace would win the trick, and his diamond stopper would be gone before he could realize a lead in spades. A low diamond, and when East played small, fearlessly put up the King, which of course held. He then led a low heart from the King and West, wishing to preserve his heart entry to the diamond suit when it should be established, played small, so Dummy's Queen won this trick. A low diamond was now led from Dummy and the Knave played by South; this trick West joyously gobbled in with the Ace, and returned to the King, establishing two tricks in that suit for which the Ace of hearts seemed a sure entry. Dummy's King of diamonds won this trick, and five clubs were cashed, making nine tricks in all.

The East-West team, who are fairly good players, indulged in a long conference as to which deserved the greater share of the blame.

TOMORROW'S HAND.
If South is playing the contract of three trumps, and West opens a spade club, what is the correct line of defense if East is later permitted to hold a diamond trick, knowing that the partnership has two established clubs?

100 SIGN PETITION FOR COOPER PARDON

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 29.—(AP)—Van Lee Wood, Los Angeles attorney, returned today from a visit to Marlboro county where he said he obtained "strong support" in a movement for clemency for C. D. Cooper.

Good said more than 100 prominent citizens of the county where Cooper in 1921 was convicted for slaying a taxi driver and sentenced to life in prison signed a petition asking Governor Blackwood to free him. A majority of the jurors who found Cooper guilty and many officials of the county joined the appeal, he said.

The journey here to press the clemency appeal after Cooper, who had escaped from prison, had been re-arrested in Los Angeles and returned to the South Carolina penitentiary.

Cooper, assuming the name of Ben M. Jones upon his escape eight years ago, had "made good" in California as a moving picture projectionist.

Walden Big Help In Bantam Victory

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 29.—(AP)—For the second time this season the Charlotte Bantams handed the Wilmington professional club a beating, winning from them 13 to 7, here today. After two threats had been stopped by Wilmington, Charlotte scored in the second period when a 25-yard pass, Kester to Walden, had placed the ball on the 4-yard line. In two tries Ed McIntosh went over and Crossland kicked point from placement.

Friendly Counsel
BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD.
Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondents are asked to name their address in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:
Fourteen years ago I married a man much older than I. I haven't been happy, nor yet unhappy. He loves me devotedly but I know I have never loved him. I have met a man at once the most gentle and manly creature I have ever seen. He has all the qualities one might admire. He couldn't begin to give me in a material way what my husband gives me, yet I would be content with it however little it might be. He has not openly declared his love for me but he pays me veiled compliments and shows a marked preference for me when we are at parties. I have always been a modest and discreet woman, never indulging in any sort of flirtation. You may think this is just an infatuation but it is not. Just to see this man come into a room makes my heart race and skip beats. Which is better, to live with a man that you respect and admire or to break loose with the hope of finding real happiness. RUFFIANS KIDNAP, ASSAULT WOMAN

Pretty Los Angeles Housewife Is Victim of Brutal Crime.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29.—(P)—Kidnaped and assaulted by several ruffians who abducted her from her husband and brother after slugging the escorts, Mrs. Corinne Houser, pretty 23-year-old housewife, was held captive for two hours today before police found her and took her to a receiving hospital.

The woman was beaten severely about the head, but was able to return to her home after emergency treatment. She told officers that at least three of the men attacked her and said she fainted twice during the ordeal.

Her husband, Glenn Houser, and her brother, George Delahanty, were found unconscious where their assailants had left them and after being revived related the story of the attack and assisted police in the search for Mrs. Houser, who was found walking dazedly and unable to give coherent answers to questions.

Mrs. Houser said a motor car containing eight or ten men drew up to the curb where she, her husband and

Dollfuss Says Austria Has Survived Crisis

VIENNA, Oct. 29.—(P)—Chancellor Dollfuss told a rural mass meeting at a town northwest of here today that Austria has turned the corner.

"We have tried to overcome the economic crisis step by step without demagoguery and today we can say the danger is past," he said. The chancellor expressed particular gratification at the success of the government's lottery loan to which nearly 90,000 Austrians have subscribed 255,000,000 schillings (approximately $45,000,000) in amounts ranging from 100 schillings upward.

"This loan is proof that the population has confidence in the government," said the chancellor. At the same time it is a disillusionment for those who have been trying to tell the public that Austria's business is in bad shape.

brother were talking, that some of them attacked her escorts and others picked her up and carried her to the machine.

"I tried to scream and fight my way out as the car sped away," she said, "but one of the men struck me behind the ear. I must have fainted for the next I remember there were eight or ten men around me."

Mrs. Houser said she did not know where she was taken and that she was kidnapped about 1 o'clock this morning.

"Even when I begged for pity the men tormented me," she said. "When I fainted the second time from sheer exhaustion I believe they let me alone, but I cannot remember being rescued by the police."

PINCHOT TALKS COURSE FOR DRYS

Says Sincere Members of Both Sides Must Now Work Together.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 29.—The sincere drys and the sincere wets must effect a working combination if there is to be prevented a return to the conditions obtaining in the United States before prohibition, Governor Pinchot declares in an address before the Penn State Christian Association.

Outlining his lifelong belief in prohibition and his personal adherence to its principles in his introduction and restating his belief that prohibition can be enforced, the governor states that repeal is no longer a question. It is here except for a few days, he says, and he admonishes drys to accept that fact and bow to the will of the majority.

The governor then gives his views on the steps necessary to be taken if a return to the pre-prohibition days with the alliance of liquor and politics and saloons is to be prevented.

He says: "This nation is not going straight to the dogs. A great majority of the American people are decent, temperate, clear thinking, clean living folk. In the end their will must prevail.

"Accepting as a good citizen the decision of the majority does not mean the surrender of my convictions. Especially it does not remove my obligation to help in reducing to the minimum the evils which, in my judgment, the return of liquor will surely bring with it. To that end:

"1. The saloon must not come back. On this point there is a general agreement between sincere drys and sincere wets.

"2. Liquor must be kept out of politics. On this point also there is a general agreement between sincere drys and sincere wets.

"3. Liquor must not be sold without restraint. It must not be sold at every hot dog stand along the highways.

"4. A general agreement between sincere drys and sincere wets, then it is perfectly clear that they ought to work together to put these points over. They ought to work together to prevent the return of liquor from bringing back the worst of the evils which might easily come with it.

"In my judgment the business of the sincere drys from now on is to attempt to nullify the decision of the American people, which incidentally cannot be done, but to work with all other men and women of good will to keep down the evils of liquor."

"It is my business and your business, as I see it, to co-operate with all who will cooperate with us for the wise and effective handling of the liquor traffic. It is our business to prevent every preventable evil. It is our business to hold back by the dam of efficient control that flood of troubles which would fall upon our people if liquor were allowed once more to become the tool of unscrupulous politicians and the dispenser of innumerable promiscuous dispensers of booze.

"Our job is not over because the eighteenth amendment is about to be repealed. On the contrary, the drys need to be far more active than they have been for years. Not active to defeat the will of the American people, but to create a new will and to regulate and control liquor for the greatest good of the greatest number. We are drys, but we are Americans first."

Rosenblatt To Interpret Amusement Code At Meeting of Theater Owners Here Today

Sol A. Rosenblatt, national compliance head of the NRA in charge of all amusements, arrived here Saturday for the theater owners' convention. He was welcomed by Atlanta leaders of the association. Those shown in the group above are, left to right, Lionel H. Keene, southern division manager of Low's, Inc., R. B. Wilby, Mr. Rosenblatt, Mrs. Rosenblatt and R. B. Wilby, operator of the Fox, Paramount and Georgia theaters here. Staff photo.

With the registration Sunday of 50 or more delegates to the Southeastern Theater Owners' Association annual convention at the Ansley hotel, a meeting of the executive committee Sunday afternoon and a ride over the city for some of the prominent national visitors, including Mr. and Mrs. Sol A. Rosenblatt, of New York, and Ed Kuykendall, of Greenville, Miss., delegates were ready for the convening of the body this morning at the Ansley.

Sol A. Rosenblatt, just named national compliance head of the NRA, in charge of all amusements by General Hugh Johnson, head of the NRA, will speak on the convention program at 10 o'clock this morning. Mr. Rosenblatt has been in charge of the theater code hearings in Washington for the last five weeks as deputy administrator of the NRA and his appearance at the convention here is of national significance, as it marks his first public utterance since his appointment to the important post in charge of all amusements from now on.

The theater code is now in the hands of General Johnson and is expected to go to President Roosevelt for signature some time during this week. As it deals with stars and executives' salaries, hours of work in theaters, wages in theaters and elements of fair competition, the address of Mr. Rosenblatt will have a national bearing.

Others to appear on the program

RUM ADS BARRED FROM DRY STATES

Postoffice Will Not Admit Advertising Addressed Into Dry Areas.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(P)—Repeal or no repeal, the Reed amendment will not allow the postoffice department to accept liquor advertisements addressed to persons in dry states.

The postoffice department made that clear today in a statement based on a ruling of the department of justice. Recent publication of liquor advertisements in expectation of repeal raised the question which results in the ruling.

The department of justice was quoted as stating that the Reed amendment, prohibiting the use of the mails for advertisement of intoxicating liquors or the solicitation of orders for such liquors in prohibition states, was not affected by "the so-called beer act of March 22, 1933" and would not be affected in the event of repeal.

"The ratification of the 21st amendment (repeal of the 18th) will not, therefore, authorize the postoffice department to admit to the mails the matter which is now unlawful under that statute," the postoffice said.

The Reed amendment provides that no letter, postal card, circular, newspaper, pamphlet, or publication of any kind containing an advertisement of or a solicitation of any orders for liquors shall be admitted to the use of the mails when directed to any addressee at a place or point in any state in which it is by the law in force in the state . . . unlawful to advertise or solicit orders for such liquors. . . .

"Advertisements or solicitations of the kind defined in the foregoing statute are not now mailable and in the opinion of the attorney-general will not be mailable to or in prohibition states in the event of repeal. The postoffice department will be guided accordingly."

"In compliance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1917, the department is now preparing for publication a notice of the names of the

WOMAN LEADER ASKS EQUAL NRA RIGHTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—(P)—An attack against eight NRA permanent codes as embodying wage and hour differences between men and women was made today by Miss Maude Younger in a letter to Hugh S. Johnson.

Miss Younger is congressional chairman of the national women's party. "We again ask that you adopt a general policy for the NRA which will give women an equal opportunity with men for self-support, just as you have adopted certain fundamental policies with regard to labor organizations," Miss Younger wrote to Johnson.

DOG, HIT BY AUTO, WAITS AT HOSPITAL FOR 'LOST' OWNER

There is an injured fox terrier, badly hurt, frightened and lonesome, lying in a pen at the Edgewood Dog and Cat hospital at 420 Edgewood avenue today, that owes its life to a kind woman who took it from the street after a man had run it down and refused to render aid.

The dog has a white body spotted with black. It wears a harness, but not a tag. A man driving an automobile ran over it on Highland avenue near Bellevue drive Sunday afternoon. The man stopped his car, went back and looked, and then drove on.

A woman who had seen the luckless dog fail to escape the speeding dog and it didn't whimper. The doctor expressed a wish that the owner might learn about the accident and call. For dog, he said, are smart. The hurt little fox terrier knows that the doctor is trying to help it, but Dr. Rife has an idea that one long look at the face of its master will do more for it than all his pills.

Dr. Rife said the dog obviously was a pet. It was a good-looking dog and it didn't whimper. The doctor expressed a wish that the owner might learn about the accident and call. For dog, he said, are smart. The hurt little fox terrier knows that the doctor is trying to help it, but Dr. Rife has an idea that one long look at the face of its master will do more for it than all his pills.

114 GALLONS OF LIQUOR SEIZED IN HOTEL RAID

Cans, jugs, kegs and bottles, containing 114 gallons of whiskey, were confiscated in rooms on two floors of the Savoy hotel, on Baker street, early Sunday morning by Lieutenant E. S. Acree and two members of the police raiding squad. J. C. Turner, of a Baker street address, on whose person the policemen said they found keys which gave entrance to the rooms in which the whiskey was found, was arrested on suspicion. Policemen Arthur Daley and J. B. Morton accompanied Lieutenant Acree.

Notes of a Southern Naturalist

By H. A. CARTER.

OPOSSUMS.

On a lonely, dusty road late one afternoon I was startled to confront three long-eared hounds that were too lazy to walk, but made progress of sorts by loping along their way, throwing a leg here and there as needed to keep from falling. They paid me no attention at all, and since I am not overly fond of hounds, I was secretly glad of the sight. Following a few paces behind the dogs came a dark, dumpy animal that seemed to be something upward of 100 years old.

"Good evening, Uncle," I accosted him. "Where are you going?" "I'm going to the cap'n's," he returned. "Goin' after possum, cap'n. I got de taters, but dey ain' no Thanksgiving 'n' widout dey's possum, too."

"Well, I wish you luck, Uncle," I said, starting away.

"Yessuh! Thank 'ee, such, cap'n." He touched his cap and became one with the gathering darkness.

Continuing on the way to town, I thought over the many ways of appreciating the most curious beast in America. Opossum! A close relative of the kangaroo, and under our very noses. At opposite ends of the chain of appreciation stand the scientist and his dandy. The one thinks of the American opossum in terms of teeth, bones, skull and mode of reproduction; the other in terms of culinary accomplishment. While it is not impossible that these extremes should approach each other and even overlap occasionally, it is rare that they do so.

And since the possum and taters are familiar to almost every southerner, let me give you a few of the points that make the opossum a most interesting animal to the zoologist.

First of all, there are the teeth. A primitive dental formula is usually considered a mark of great racial age and the opossum has a battery of teeth that is the despair of less well-equipped animals. There are 50 teeth—no more and no less—in the perfect opossum mouth. And while there are four kinds of teeth that mammals possess they are yet primitive in pattern and have none of the exquisite modifications of cusps that the humble field mouse has. The tribitubercular, or three-cusped, tooth, is reduced to its lowest terms in the opossum jaw. And opossums are mentally dull. Hunters may disagree, but a few facts about the brain will prove it. Space is lacking today, but we will tell you about it tomorrow.

NANCY PAGE

Quilts and Bridge Can Be Neighborly
BY FLORENCE LA GANKE.

The Nancy Page Quilt Club was having a bridge party. Many of their friends could not believe that the women knew anything but quilts. To prove differently the club put on a quilt bridge. It was really a lot of fun. The hosts were a checked dress which was dubbed a "nine patch." Whenever a guest arrived wearing a flowered print the group looked at it critically trying to decide whether it would make a good design for a quilt applique.

The refreshments were ice cream and cake—but not the usual kind. The cake was a large oblong loaf used to represent an applique quilt top with wreaths of flowers and a vine and flower border. This was done in pink, white and green.

The ice cream was molded in a brick and consisted of alternate cubes of strawberry cream and pineapple ice. The effect, when the brick was cut, was of a nine-patch in pink and white.

But the best part was the quilt, connected with quilts in some fashion. The first prize was a boxed package holding enough die-cut pieces in plain green, figured green print and in white to make a pine tree quilt.

The second prize was a booklet of quilt patterns.

The consolation prize a large cotton hat. The recipient of this was told she should not bat an eye when low scores were figured nor was she to consider herself so precious that she needed to wrap herself in cotton wool.

BARGAIN IN LOVE

BY JANE DIXON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. Harry Hume, Sue Sutter's employer, takes her along to help Mathilda Fetherstone, his secretary, when he goes to Paris on business. Held closely to their work, Sue and Mathilda see nothing of the brilliant French capital during the two-month stay and Sue is rebellious when they start back for New York. The first evening aboard the Tonien, Jeffrey Randall saves her from being picked overboard in a sudden storm but she distrusts this young scion of wealth. Although Mrs. Hume accuses her of a grossness of being in Paris with her husband, he asks her that evening, on the moonlit deck, to marry him. Without even taking her hand, he tells her that in seven days he will be 27 years old, and it is not married then, he loses the Randall fortune to his cousin, Beatrice and Cyril. Sue agrees but only after giving her history. Her father, a lawyer, died when her younger brother, Tommy, was 8. Her mother married Herman Beaschler and Sue has been sending home every cent she earns over living expenses, so her stepfather will not take Tommy out of school and put him to work. Delphine Cragston overhears Mrs. Hume and a private detective named Azard plotting against Sue but cannot learn what Mrs. Hume's motive is. This is after Jeff Randall has informed her that Sue is his wife. He also informs Mrs. S. Van Pelt Cragston, Delphine's mother, a social climber, pleading her to secretly marry him. Knowing she will spread the news, Mathilda agrees to remain with Sue and Jeff and "see it through."

Tommy, but you're not to let any one suspect you're surprised. Can you do it? You ought to, a big man like you."

"Sure, I can." Sue felt the swiftness of youth challenged and thanked her gods for it. "What do we do now?"

"We step out—toward that group with the red-headed man in the center."

"O. K. Sis. Lead the way."

Sue, her arm around Tommy's shoulder, approaching the clod of adventure as though it did not exist. Chattering at Tommy.

"We had a perfectly stunning time in Paris—the tennis matches were on—you must see them with us next year, Tommy. Oh—I beg your pardon! Jeffrey—"

"Lo, old man!" Jeffrey grasped Tommy's hand. "Thought you'd turn up to welcome Sue."

"Sure." Tommy's dark eyes meeting the gray-blue ones. They clod of people around the red-headed man widened.

"Sue," Jeffrey's voice was steady and resonant as a bell. May I present Mr. Gifford? The executor of the estate. Sue knew him. Those gold-rimmed glasses. Punctilious. Cracked ice jangling in a bowl.

"And my cousins, Sue, Beatrice and Cyril Randall."

"So good of you to welcome us," Sue heard herself saying. What must she do now? A pressure on her arm. "Mrs. Randall! Mathilda's fingers bit deep to steady Sue. "I've arranged for two trucks, your immediate needs, to go right along. I'll stay until the customs goes through the others."

Mrs. Randall! Sue's eyes fled to Tommy. He was watching her, his sensitive chin hinting at a quiver.

"Thanks Ma—Miss Fetherstone."

Sue stole herself against the quiver. "This is my companion, Miss Fetherstone."

Mathilda vouchsafed a negligible nod. Her command steeled Sue.

Sue's hand slipped under Jeffrey's arm in a gesture that was, to say the least, clinging. "Jeff has been telling me so much about you all, you'll pardon me for being somewhat distrustful. I thought we'd slip in quietly."

Mrs. Randall had had rather a difficult crossing. Jeffrey interposed, possessing himself of Sue's hand. "The first night out there was a storm and she twisted her ankle."

"Oh, how dreadful!" Beate Randall stepped forward. "It's so selfish of us keeping you here. Sue addressing Cyril Randall, "We must see that Jeff's wife is taken to her car immediately. Sil, can't you do something about it?"

Sue had an opportunity for a hasty summation of Beate Randall. Small and dark and vital. Dynamics. Never mind about the pale cheeks. Look at the eyes, burning. And the lips like polio. The hand slim and tenuous. Cyril what? Sue must see that Jeff's wife is taken to her car immediately. Sil, can't you do something about it?"

"Rather," Cyril Randall dragged on a cigarette, tossed it away. "Every thing's arranged. Aside to Sue: "Pardon me, Mrs. Randall, but we were not expecting anyone so soon."

"So what?" Sue tipped back her chin and laughed. A ringing laugh. "So—adequate." Cyril Randall's eyes narrowed. Sue felt the touch of the rapier. Warfare? Then let there be warfare. Sue was not to be frightened by pallid cheeks and sloping brows.

"Nice of you to be so kind." Sue simulated the confusion Jeffrey had recommended. "Jeffrey—Tommy—"

"It's horrid of us flocking in on you this way," Beate Randall leaped to the breach. Sue caught the searching scrutiny of Mr. Gifford, the executor, in the background. So he suspected her, did he? Then she would ally his suspicions. Ice thinking in a bowl. Melt the ice. And hold onto Tommy's hand. Dear Tommy.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

A General Weekly Review of Commerce and Industry Affecting the Greater Atlanta Trade Territory

Carson & Dobbins Offer Aetna 'Span Plan' To Continue Income After Death

PROGRAM TO TIDE BEREAVED FAMILY OVER FIRST YEAR

Marked Business Improvement During October Noted by General Agents Here.

Believing that the period immediately following a man's death is the most difficult for those who survive him, the Aetna Life Insurance Company, of which Carson & Dobbins, 801-11 William-Oliver building, are general agents, has introduced what is known as the "span plan," to guarantee a continuation of the income of the deceased breadwinner for a period of 12 months.

"Too frequently," declares Paul H. Dobbins, co-partner with Sam M. Carson, "with the sudden passing of the breadwinner, and amid the poignant grief of a bereaved family, there comes the sharp realization that there is not now that usual, regular salary check, coupled with the bewildering problem of adjustment to reduced circumstances."

It is to meet this situation, he states, that the "span plan" has been introduced.

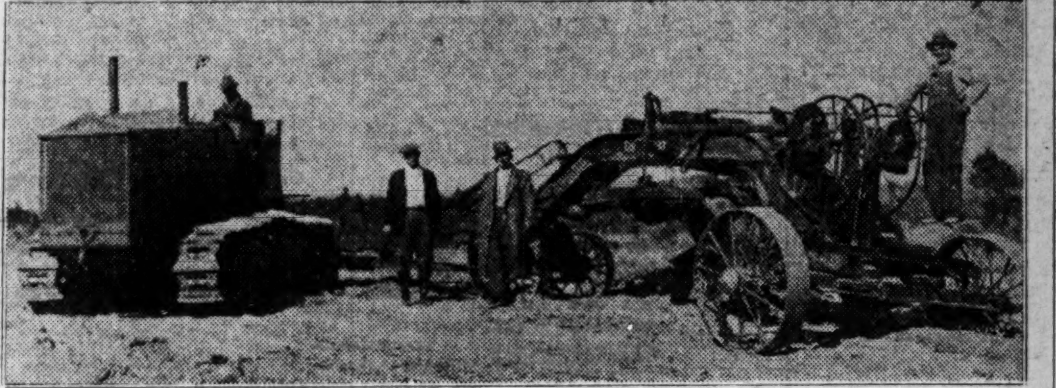

"The man interested in the future welfare of his family," he states, "should build now a secure span to carry his family comfortably over the readjustment period that would follow his death. That is when they will need it most. Through this Aetna Life plan, designed particularly for this emergency, he can continue his salary check in full to his family during that perplexing and critical year."

Under the "span plan," the breadwinner may pay a premium of a stipulated amount per year for each $100 of monthly salary he wishes to continue. The "span" policy bears a heavy load, he states, here far proven by the best business month of 1932.

Applications already have been received during October for life insurance aggregating approximately a half-million dollars, and for a similar amount in group insurance. In addition, he states, there has been an increasingly large demand for life annuities and accident insurance. Business, he states, has experienced a very noticeable improvement over that for October of 1932.

Diesel Cletrac, Austin Tractors Proving Speedy Economical in Highway Building

A Cleveland "80" Diesel Cletrac tractor is here shown pulling an Austin 14-foot tractor on a road project in Hall county, near Gainesville, where they are employed in cutting a cross section link between two highways. Standing in the center are Tom Randolph (left), chairman of the board of commissioners of roads and revenues of Hall county, and J. P. Davis, member of the board.

The famous "red hills" of Georgia are rapidly being interlarded with smooth, winding boulevards, not only along the main highway routes but criss-crossing throughout the various counties of the state.

This transformation is largely the result of the invention of modern machinery and an ever-increasing knowledge of civil engineering. The Cleveland "80" Diesel Cletrac tractor and the Austin 14-foot tractor, along with other modern road machinery, distributed in this section by the Blalock Machinery & Equipment Company, are turning former rural roads, that for generations have been mere lanes imbedded with ruts, into smooth roads with sloping banks at the lowest possible expense, and making travel via automobiles and other forms of transportation a pleasure in speedy and safe time.

A visit to Hall county last week revealed marked progress in road construction under the efficient supervision of Tom Randolph, chairman of that county's board of commissioners of roads and revenues, and J. P. Davis, member of the county commission.

Both were warm in their praise of the extreme economy and efficiency of the Diesel Cletrac and the Austin 14-foot tractor, which were purchased after a thorough and careful study of these factors in every leading tractor in the field.

Both Randolph and Davis pointed to the fact that they were cutting through a new road—a distance of from three to four miles—and that the task would be completed within eight to ten days, whereas under the former system of muscular crews it would have required at least 30 days or more.

October business month has been named, joined the Aetna organization in 1924 as general agent here, and was joined in turn by Mr. Dobbins in 1929. Mr. Dobbins has been a partner in the agency more than a year.

Furthermore, they stressed the marked economy and speed of operation of the Diesel and the Austin. The demonstration, they said, was far beyond their expectations, the two tractors cutting roads and sidings in less than two-thirds of the time it formerly required. The fuel costs were curtailed about two-thirds.

"Under the old system, it would require a small army of convicts to perform a similar job," Mr. Davis said, "whereas all we need now is the Diesel Cletrac and the Austin tractor, and two men to operate them. No muscular crew could possibly cut banks down and surface the roadbed as do these machines. This Austin tractor cuts a bank at from a mere six inches to 14 feet, and the entire fleet can easily make a complete turn-around within the space of from 15 to 20 feet."

"The Diesel engine consumes about 25 gallons of fuel a day, which can be purchased for about 6 cents a gallon in tank cars."

"Hall county is well pleased with both machines and other equipment we purchase from the Blalock Machinery & Equipment Company."

D. S. Blalock, manager of the Atlanta concern, which maintains headquarters at 389 Whitehall street, S. W., and covers the entire state, says Georgia is making good progress in its highways and good roads.

"However," he says, "our greatest progress in this direction will be forthcoming when Georgia receives its $10,000,000 from the government for public works. I believe Georgia, from a sound business and economic standpoint, is far better off than the majority of other states."

The Blalock Machinery & Equipment Company handles a complete line of road machinery and allied lines, including Diesel engines, gas and steam shovels, drag lines, crushers, rock crushers, belt conveyors, rollers, graders, steam pumps, asphalt plants, asphalt applicators, graders, road and street sweepers, wagons, loaders and air compressors.

LEVY MAY RAISE PRICES ON CANDY

Brower Company Urges Buying at Present Rates To Effect Savings.

Calling the attention of dealers to the prospect of an early imposition of a corn processing tax which in turn will increase the price of glucose, William M. Wallace, president of the Brower Candy Company, 187 Edgewood avenue, urges all to take advantage of present prices to effect savings on their Christmas holiday candies.

"A corn processing levy is virtually certain," says Mr. Wallace, "and this, being applicable to glucose, naturally can be expected to directly affect candy prices all along the line. For this reason, merchants who sell candies of any kind, with a view to economical purchase, should buy at existing prices."

With Christmas, like prosperity, right around the corner, Mr. Wallace reports retailers not only in Atlanta but throughout the southeast are taking advantage of present prices to order their holiday candy supplies, many of them for later delivery.

The Brower Candy Company, which stands as one of the leading candy wholesaling concerns in the south, has warned retailers throughout its trade territory of the necessity for buying Christmas candies early, citing the fact that all candy factories are running for behind their production schedule, and that within a short time it will be impossible to order

Perhaps the newest of these, just being introduced to Atlanta, is "Sonne Boy" penny candy, which carries an instant appeal to boys. Officially endorsed by the Boy Scouts of America, each package, attractively illustrated, contains a handsome lithographed card illustrating and describing some activity of the Boy Scout organization.

In addition, the Brower Candy Company carries a countless assortment of novelties and trade stimulants, for which retailers in all parts of the southeast report growing demand. Any dealer would do well to investigate the Brower line of novelties. A visit to the Edgewood avenue headquarters is invited, or a company salesman will be sent to call on any retailer upon request.

The Brower Candy Company, with a view to giving the utmost in service to its customers, carries a full line of the candies of every major bulk and staple manufacturer in the country, including Curries, Bunte, Mars, Peter, Paul, Gowdy, Henry Heide, Hershey and others.

COTTON MARKET ACTIVITY GROWS, PRICES ADVANCE

Rise on Strength of Gold Buying Policy Reduced to 31-Point Gain in Later Trading.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The cotton market has been somewhat more active during the past week, although there have been some periods of extreme quiet. The course of prices has been upward although the advances occurred in the first part of the week after the gold buying policy at higher prices by the government was announced. The market was further stimulated by the holding movement by producers of spot cotton.

On the other hand the market showed some tendency to react in the last part of the week, owing to more liberal hedge selling weakness in stocks and wheat and the delays in starting the advance under the ten cent plan and some indications that farmers are balking at the pledges to reduce acreage during the coming season.

Prices advanced in early week to 9.73 for December, a gain of 53 points over the closing level of Saturday last. In the last days of the week prices gradually eased off under the pressure of profit taking and hedge selling losing a little over a dollar a bale and the final closing figures showed net gains for the week of 31 points.

Reports from the interior indicated that level there about completed with the crop virtually all picked except in some sections of the extreme north. Even there harvesting has been advanced to a point where the possibility of damage by frost is considered negligible.

While the holding movement in the spot market continues as determined by more liberal offerings during the middle of the week at the time prices were at their highest, but at the close of the week the firmness of holders was pronounced as ever.

Exports for the week were rather liberal and the total foreign shipments for the season now exceed last year by $26,000 bales.

High low and closing sales in the futures market during the past week compared with a year ago follows:

High Low Close Last Yr.
October 9.61 9.10 9.34 5.97
November 9.73 9.27 9.31 6.10
December 9.81 9.35 9.58 6.13
January 9.98 9.49 9.74 6.24
March 10.11 9.64 9.80 6.34

PRICES MOVE AHEAD ON BULLISH ACTIVITY.
NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Cotton prices moved ahead last week on a moderate amount of bullish activity engendered by the president's announcement on gold and monetary control.

The market had an extreme advance of about $2.50 a bale, but part of the gain disappeared as a result of realizing. Final prices for the period showed gains of $1.50 to $1.75 a bale over the final levels of October 21.

Considering the inflationary implications which a large section of Wall Street professed to sense in the president's program of gold buying and currency management, the market's response lacked the ardor of previous reactions to inflation incidents.

The trade continued to lean that growers were continuing their holding movement so that they might take advantage of the government loan, or, at least, to scrutinize the loan terms before parting with their cotton.

Battery Weakness Often Is Major Cause Of Motor Ailments, Seth Mellen Asserts

Above is a view of the shop of the Mellen Battery Company on Ivy street at Baker, where complete service is offered on every kind of battery. Motorists are invited to visit the Mellen shop, headquarters for Willard batteries but specialists in every make, for inspection and repairs.

Often a car that acts "jumpy"—is hard to start or lacks pep in acceleration—may be suffering from battery weakness, says Seth Mellen, of the Mellen Battery Company, who during the week-end issued a call to all motor owners to have their batteries checked and put in first-class condition in preparation for the strenuous duty they must perform during the winter months.

"Many motorists forget," said Mr. Mellen, who is the Willard battery dealer in Atlanta, "that the battery and the electrical system form the heart of an automobile. When the car begins to act up, they begin to look for trouble in the motor and overlook the important but inconspicuous battery down under the floor boards."

"We have had many a case come into our station at Baker and Ivy streets in which the car owner thought he had something seriously wrong with his motor—and had put off repairs because he couldn't afford them. In reality all he needed was a re-charge and a few inexpensive repairs to his storage battery to bring his car back to normal."

Mr. Mellen believes that under present economic conditions many Atlanta motorists will appreciate having this brought to their attention.

"We make a Willard service test and battery diagnosis available, without cost to Atlanta motorists," Mr. Mellen added, "regardless of the make of battery. We are hoping many car owners in this city will take advantage of this service."

The Mellen Battery Company, which, in addition to its shop at 273 Ivy street, N. E., maintains a second plant and shop at 563 Whitehall street, S. W., is fully equipped to give complete service not only on automobile batteries, but on those for trucks, buses, boats, lighting plants, radios, telephones, annunciator systems, airplanes, Diesel engines and sound projection machines.

Life Insurance • Savings
An endowment insurance is a contract to pay a definite sum to the holder of the policy at the end of a definite term of years. If he does not live until the end of the period the sum is payable, as soon as his death occurs, to the beneficiary named or to his estate.

The plan combines life insurance with savings. It gives the largest investment coupled with protection. It is a favorite with those whose chief aim is to save a sure fund for old age, but who wish at the same time to provide for continuing an income for their families if death occurs before the endowment matures.

TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE No. 49

For what seemed an eternity, La stood watching the lion, which stood motionless. Could it be that, sure of his prey and not yet hungry, he merely waited until he was quite ready to make his kill? The idea was horrible and even La's iron nerves commenced to weaken.

She knew she could not escape, and so better instant death than this suspense. Gathering all the forces of self-control that she possessed, she placed the point of her dagger to her heart and walked boldly past the lion. She could scarcely endure the strain.

Should he attack her, she would end her agony instantly by plunging the blade into her heart. Jaded by the lion, but with a half-closed eye, he watched the woman cross the clearing and disappear beyond the turn of the trail that wound its way back into the jungle.

All that day, La looked for the country of Tarzan. She found fruits and tubers to allay her hunger, and as the trail descended a valley in which a river ran, she did not want for water. At night she crept into a tree to sleep, but this time no Tarzan watched over her safety.
